TRINITY OF LUCK

Feng Shui is centered on creating a harmonious space and environment that radiates balance and tranquillity. One of the fundamental principles of this ancient practice is to recreate the essence of nature within a space. It is no surprise that we often encounter negative energy due to the immediate surroundings and environment around our buildings. Such energy can lead to misfortune in various aspects of life, including relationships, wealth, legal issues, or health problems.

We may not be able to change our neighbourhood and surroundings, but we can certainly apply Feng Shui to counteract negative effects and restore harmony within our space. These corrective measures will significantly reduce disruptive energy and enhance the positive energy that feels beneficial.

From subatomic particles to skyscrapers, from good vibes to auras, everything in the universe is said to be vibrating. Every part of us is vibrating energy, and we live in an environment filled with vibrating energy. Our personal vibrations interact with the vibrations of our surroundings, including the people, places, and things that make up our world. The art of Feng Shui helps us actively choose or intend to engage with the favourable energy available to us at all times.

Feng Shui categorises a person's life and events into three types of luck: Heaven Luck, Human Luck, and Earth Luck (Tien Ti Ren in ancient Chinese Philosophy).

HEAVEN LUCK

Heaven Luck refers to the alignment of planetary and solar energies at the time of birth that can either support or challenge your earthly journey. It can also be understood as the family and environment into which we are born—factors beyond our control or choice. Human Luck, on the other hand, is the result of our personal efforts in every aspect of life. Our past, education, upbringing, life experiences, and all our thoughts and decisions collectively shape the Human Luck we experience in the present.

EARTH LUCK

Earth Luck refers to the fortune derived from our immediate personal environment. It can either support our individual vibration frequency or present challenges. This luck may manifest as difficulties at work, the good fortune of finding your soulmate, health issues or anything in between.

In other words, even if a person possesses excellent Heaven Luck and Human Luck, poor Earth Luck can be detrimental to their life, causing obstacles and misery.

When Feng Shui principles, grounded in precise compass readings and a range of specific calculations, are applied, they can effectively activate your Human and Earth Luck, helping you achieve your personal and professional goals with fewer obstacles and less resistance.

To counter negative energy in a space, one could try using crystals, although classical Feng Shui offers many methods, including the use of colour, light, sound, objects, and the strategic placement of rooms and décor. Placing crystals in the four major corners of the home can help dispel negative energy or bad luck and attract abundant wealth and good fortune to the family.

Feng Shui is the practice of placement and arrangement that requires precision and attention to detail. For example, when building a new house, one considers the orientation or facing direction of the house, the shape of the rooms, and the arrangement of the furniture. Therefore, it is no surprise that Feng Shui can have positive effects and bring about meaningful changes in our lives when applied accurately.
